Successful Chautauqua Is Assured

Monessen's plans for the biggest Chautauqua in her history are well under way and with delegations making a thorough canvas of the town with tickets, there is little doubt but that the Volunteer Fire Department will realize a neat sum from the proceeds. M. M. Witherspoon, the advance man, who arrived yesterday morning, is putting his time to a good advantage, and already the town is bedecked with streamers. and banners.

This evening at 7 o'clock an auto parade will be held by guarantors and friends of the Chautauqua movement and with flying streamers, the autos will traverse the principal streets of the town. The little colored Chautauqua caps will be distributed by Mr. Witherspoon before the parade starts from in front of the P. & L. E. freight station.

The Iowa school building grounds are being put in shape for the arrival of the twenty-four hour men with their huge tent and it is expected that the big canvas top will be in full readiness for the opening program on Monday morning. A new feature this season will be the installation of a telephone at the tent for the convenience of doctors and any others who may have important business to attend to during the week. The Boy Scouts will be on the job early Monday morning and will likely erect a refreshment stand on the grounds.

Sunday School To Hold Annual Outing

The Sunday School of the English Lutheran church will hold their annual picnic at Lynn's Grove, near Belle Vernon next Thursday. The entire congregation as well as all friends of the children and members are invited. Free transportation will be provided by automobiles, the use of which has been kindly loaned by members and friends. Automobiles will leave the church, corner of Eighth and Donner avenue at nine o'clock a. m.

Selling Tickets

Tickets for the Chautauqua are selling rapidly and most people are taking advantage of the low price before the Chautauqua gets here. The price is $2.00 for the entire course of entertainments for adult tickets and $1.00 for children under fifteen years of age. There will be a meeting of the firemen, the salesmen and the guarantors at the Monessen Savings & Trust company Wednesday at 7:15 and all persons who have tickets are supposed to be present and report.

Superiors Lose

The Superior club went to Perryopolis last Saturday and lost a poorly played game by the score of 15-3. The score by innings:

Perry. .0 0 2 1 7 0 3 2 x—15 12 4

Batteries for Superiors — Ryan, Muir and Myers. Perryopolis—Carson, Nicols and Hixenbaugh. Tomorrow the Superiors go to Roscoe to play the fast Roscoe club.

AMERICAN GREEKS ARE READY TO SAIL

Boston, Mass., July 20.—Fully 20,000 Greek reservists in New England are in training ready to embark for service against the Turks. It is estimated at their headquarters here that fully a hundred thousand Greek reservists will go back from America when the call comes. In the mill cities, the men hold parades each evening, perform military tactics and engage in rifle practice.

Company Must Explain Raise In Water Rates

The Monessen News has written an editorial in defense of the water company. It must have been a hard job these hot days.

No matter how many editorials are written in favor of the water company, it would be a hard matter to stem the tide of public sentiment against that concern, for its bold attempt to rob the people.

We want it understood that this is not a newspaper fight, but a water fight that must be carried on until this concern is shown that the people have certain constitutional, if not legal, rights. The water company has no defense. If it has, let it make its defense known. It can use space in this paper to state its position to the consumers. The Mellon interests are able to pay for publicity if they want publicity, and we will be glad to accept for publication, any statement they wish to make. In fact we would be glad to hear some explanation for the raise in water rates after the testimony given at the suit the town instituted to prevent the merger.

Company hirelings went on the stand and testified, made the sworn statements that, if there was any change in the water rates they would be lowered. How can they get past the fact that they are raising the rates? How can they explain why they are raised? Has water gone up since the war broke out? Is there any reason for a raise except that the Mellons want bigger profits? If there is any reason for this aside from the fact that they want bigger profits, for heavens sake tell us about it, don't keep us in such terrible expense.

We have shown you where the company is going to get approximately $10,000 interest annually out of the town from forcing a meter system. This amount is interest alone. Greensburg has figured that the Westmoreland water company is making practically sixty per cent. How much do you suppose the Tri-Cities is making? We don't know, but we're going to find out. The juggling of watered stock and bogus bonds won't go any longer. People are entitled to get a look in at the inner workings.

If the News is over anxious to really know whether or not the company is violating its obligation with the people, let it peep into the records of the merger trial. Didn't the company agree to turn its plant and franchise over to the town after twenty years? Didn't it agree to sell out to the town in 1919 and during the twenty years of its existance, didn't it agree to keep its property in tact so it could be appraised as the property of the Monessen Water company. Didn't it, eh?

Well what did it do? It built a big combine, disposed of its holdings in order to get a corporation that the law could not dissolve and the News is disposed to swallow all of this and try to make the people gulp down the same nauseating morsel and smile while they are doing it.

But as we said before, the tactics used by the company are so bold and defiant that the people rebel. Public sentiment dictates the policy of every reputable newspaper, or at least should and when men pledge their money to fight the Tri-Cities water company, they certainly feel that the shoe is pinching. Monessen will take its case before the Public service commission and unless we miss our guess, we will be able to make the big barrons squeak and squirm like a Uriah Heap, for there will be revealed some of the most brazen cases of discrimination ever brought before the commission.

To raise a man's water rent from $18.00 a year to $36.00 because his mother came to spend the summer and to attempt to give the commission an excuse for doing it will be some job. To tell why a man who has four boarders is charged for twelve at $1.00 per will be another corker. To tell why a man is charged $10.00 a year for a washing machine when a wash machine never saw his door will be something of a job. But maybe they'll hire a fellow to carry a machine and set it down on the back porch, so the inspector can say he saw it there. Money makes the mare go, you know, and when the case is called, the water company will have the hired alienists.

Now we reiterate that if the water company wants to make a statement of why the rates are being raised, we will be glad to publish it. Of course we want the communication to be signed, for we don't want to be sponsor for the veracity of anything those people would say after hearing the testimony that rates would never go higher.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church will hold a moonlight picnic in McMahon's orchard, Thursday evening, July 22. All members are requested to meet at the home of Miss Blanche Brightwell, 683 Reed avenue at 7:30 o'clock.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Destefano and baby son, Joseph, returned home yesterday from Newell, W. Va., where they spent a vacation of two weeks. Ralph resumed his duties at the post office this morning.

Carries A Razor Held For Court

John Tomoschock of Third street, got on the war path yesterday after he had warmed himself up inside with whiskey. His boarding mistress ordered him from the house when he owed $10.55 for board, but refused to allow him to get his trunk out until the bill was paid. John resented this and wrapping his handkerchief around a razor, he prepared for blood. An alarm was sent to the police station and John was arrested. He was taken before Squire Shuster where he was held under $300 bond on a charge of carrying dangerous weapons. Constable Smith took him to Greensburg.

Dr. A. D. Miller For Treasurer

Dr. A. D. Miller of Manor, has announced his candidacy for the office of County Treasurer at the Republican primaries to be held September 21 and promises to be one of the strongest men in the field for this office. Dr. Miller is not unknown to local residents and for many years has led the fight for the Republican party in his community. He is a native of this county, having been born and raised here and received his education in the common schools of the county. He later attended W. & J. college and graduated in the medical course from the University of Pennsylvania in 1885.

He has not only voted the Republican ticket all his life, but has always been a hard worker for the party at the polls and elsewhere. This claim can be substantiated by any or all candidates who have visited Manor during their campaign. Dr. Miller has not missed a Republican county convention for many years and his loyalty should be rewarded by the voter sat the coming primaries. He expects to visit Monessen in the near future and will make every effort to meet the greater portion of the voters at this time.

Sunnyside Shadyside Ball Game

Arrangements are being completed today for the annual ball game between the Sunnyside and Shadyside teams of Donner avenue. Harry Lebowitz of the Olympic billiard and pool parlor, will manage the Sunnyside, while Guy R. Eddy, the druggist, will take charge of the Shadyside boys. The game will be played at the Page grounds within the next few weeks and the entire proceeds will be turned over to the Milk and Ice Fund for the Community Nurse. A number of young ladies of the town will sell the tickets.

No professionals will be allowed to participate in the game but the lineup of both teams will contain many stars of former years on the local diamond. Business men of both sides of the street will take part in the contest and practice will be started at once in order that a number of applicants for positions, who have seen better days may be eliminated. A banquet may also be arranged, the losing side to pay the bill.

School Of Methods For All Instructors

For all teachers who have had less than two years' experience and for all prospective teachers for this year, the annual School of Methods for Westmoreland county will open in the High school building, Greensburg, August 9. The school will continue for two weeks from that date.

Superintendent R. C. Shaw, head of the schools of the county, conceived the idea of the method school and first put it into practice two years ago. It follows the plan of the county institute but is a greater aid to inexperienced teachers than the regular institute. At the last school of methods, more than 500 teachers were enrolled for the week.

A tentative program for the two weeks' training school includes the following well known educators: Superintendent Wrights of Uniontown; Carroll, of the Fayette county schools; R. K. Smith of Dunbar township; H E Gress of Monessen; Steele, of Latrobe; Long of Jeannette; Alleman of Greensburg; Edwards of Scottdale; Gordy of Mt. Pleasant; Hershberger of New Kensington; Loeffer of Parnassus; Mrs. Carmalt of the University of Pittsburgh; Miss Thomas of California Normal; State High School Inspector Dr F. S. Marsh; Percy O. Peterson of Scottdale; Mrs. W. W. Ulerich of Latrobe; Miss Loucks of Scottdale; Miss Konold of Jeannette, Miss Hannah Blyholder of Greensburg; Miss Marie Weaver of Southwest Greensburg and Miss Gertrude Smith of Unity township.

Superintendent Shaw urges all teachers with less than two years' experience to attend the school. For the present year, there are more than 1,300 teachers elected for the county schools and about half that number have had little or no experience. Special arrangements and plans for the method school will be made later by Mr. Shaw.

The Record in Monessen is a Unique One

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ills and is looking for an effective kidney medicine, better depend on the remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills have given great satisfaction in such cases. Monessen citizens testify to this. Here is a case of it:

H. R Wilbur, 131 McKee avenue, Monessen, says: "I contracted a heavy cold which affected my kidneys. My back was sore and lame all the time and I had to have help to turn in bed. My whole body was like a board. I often had to have somebody dress me. Shooting pains darted through my body and I could not do my work. My body became bloated. The secretions were profuse in passage and contained sediment. I had dizzy spells and hot flashes, and I was miserable in every way. I doctored for years but didn't improve. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me and two boxes practically cured me. Now and then I take Doan's Kidney Pills as a tonic, and give them credit for keeping me well."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TENTH STORY

I.

"—and you, Donald Porter, I hereby sentence to twenty years at hard labor."

How clearly those words stayed in his memory! It was all as though it had happened yesterday. The murky, smelly courtroom, the spectators, "pleasure" bent, the newshounds of the great dailies, the striving lawyers and the purblind judge He had never been able to decide from that day to this whether the judge had been 'bought and paid for' or no What did it matter? The judge wasn't elementally responsible How clearly he remembered every fluctuation of his own distrait mind during that long trial At first he could do nothing but laugh at the absurdity of it all It concerned him at first only as a bothersome misunderstanding that robbed him of his precious time Then, as the trial went along, as false witnesses were introduced, and things fixed for his railroading to prison, and he felt with sudden horror his nearness to a punishment he didn't in the least deserve; he had become panicky at the grossness of the conspiracy against him So cleverly had Cole looted the bank, so carefully had he planned it, that it had looked, at the trial as though he (Porter), had looted it and made Cole, its president, his innocent accomplice

Cole— As he thought that name, the ugly subtle lines of his face deepened, and his fingers twitched nervously, as though yearning for that soft throat they had once squeezed within their grasp The day Cole's light sentence had ended, and he had walked jauntily amongst his fellow prisoners on his way to freedom, the guards had to be quick to save that throat from those yearning fingers. He had almost had him that time' Well, he would get him He had told himself that time and time again.

This thought, this unquenchable hate for the man who had so tricked him was the only thing that kept the life in his poor emaciated frame—the one thing that had enabled him to stand the frightful routine of prison life these long, weary years It was no wonder to Don Porter that he remembered it all so clearly as he did. The whole thing had had a daily rehearsal in his mind, and for years now he had awakened each morning to a fresh realization of the unspeakable horror of his position, and had gone to bed each night with a curse in his heart and on his lips for the man who had so tricked him—had so spoiled his life, and the lives of those few who had put their faith in him He had been very good these past years Oh, so good!—all but that once. He had almost had him that time! That thought always gave him a moment's brief, phantom pleasure that always gave way again to despair; a despair that seemed duller, that the moment before had been touched with light. This despair was despair that he should not live to be revenged. He had made a mad, insane attack on him then, but the guard was too quick But that was fully five years ago, and he had been good since then—good with the goodness of a child who expects a reward—patient with the patience of a man who sees each day bring him nearer to his heart's desire. His heart's desire!

It seemed strange to him at odd moments that he who had always been gentle and sensitive, he who had always felt an instinctive kinship for things gentle and sensitive should now have for his heart's desire the death of another man And yet it was so It was so, and he was jealously glad of it. With the best years of his life scooped out, literally thrown away—freedom after his release held forth no promise to him—no promise but one.

II.

Edith Hilton had arrived at her twentieth year. It would be difficult to say how she had arrived at her twentieth year, unless one might say she zigzagged to it. For Edith was like most of us, that queer admixture of decision and hesitancy that set her ever out of the analyzable 'type' class, selected and labeled, and ever made her next act as uncertain as was the motive of her last.

Whatever queer twist nature had endowed her mind with, it had certainly been governed by the beautiful when it made her body, for she was of that perfection of physical beauty that makes most of us feel must reflect an inner light, as the exquisite odor of cologne suggests a delicious ness of taste

Her black hair, glossy and crisp, undulated in tiny waves down her white neck as though loath to leave a head of such delicate loveliness, her warm brown eyes, pouting lips and slim, lithe figure, making an ensemble that her worldly wise mother treasured and counted on as their ultimate salvation from the awful impecunious prestige of their social position. It was a joke, that social position. Her husband, four years before, had died comparatively poor.

He had left her and Edith with a position to maintain and nothing but a tradition on which to maintain it Hardly nothing, but very little more

The old lady had made quite a brave struggle for one who had been indulged all the years of her life But, there was Edith, Edith of great promise, almost ready for her first season out. It was a matter for speculation for those who knew, just what Mrs. Hilton would have done had Edith been two or three years younger when Charles Hilton died. Would she have attempted a struggle that entailed two or three years more privation. Or, did she throw herself into this breach because she felt that her will was just great enough to span it?

Mrs. Hilton was beginning to feel worried. Here was Edith in her twentieth year, ready, primed for conquest, as it were, and nothing to conquer!

The list of eligible young men was the list of (financially) desirable young men, and Mrs. Hilton's reserve fund, both of money and energy, were rapidly becoming exhausted.

She and her daughter sat on the porch of their home one evening at about the time this story opens, Edith just sitting, glad for the feeling of pulsating life within her, Mrs Hilton sitting and speculating. Her speculations this evening were as unavailing as they had been for many a night before, and she turned almost desperately to her paper. What she saw there caused her old frame suddenly to stiffen with eager interest as she read, her left hand held poised in the air before her much as might be the paw of a pointer dog that had started a bird. She finished and looked up, her face flushed and eager, her eyes bright

"Listen, Edith!"

"What?" abstractedly.

"I say," impatiently, "listen to this." She read aloud.

"Millionaire buys palatial residence. Richard Walker, bachelor, decides to make his home in this city. Elected member of exclusive Sunset club"

Ethel's eyebrows were raised expectant, curious, as her mother read, mouthing the words appreciatively, taking every care that they be distinct, as though they were precious sounds, and represented, each, as she spoke them correctly, certain equal portions of the fortunes so attractive to her.

"At last!" she breathed, solemnly, and Ethel would have laughed aloud had she not known from former intonations of the sort just how serious her mother was.

The Convict's Fingers Closed About the Neck of the Man Who Had Tricked Him.

The fact that she was considered as a highly valuable asset to be invested for the best returns, irked her more than she thought it polite to show; and her lack of remonstrance was taken by her mother as her daughter's mute assent to the furtherance of her obvious plans.

Edith felt that there was a time coming, and that shortly, in which she and her mother would have to have an understanding and she was secretly glad that it was not just yet, as she felt that her sense of obligation might cause her to see seriously that side of the question she knew least interested her.

"What's his name?" she said at length.

"Richard Walker — bachelor,—" meaningly. "And elected to the Sunset club We should have an opportunity to meet him shortly You know, dear—it's time we met someone The place is becoming absolutely impossible"

"Oh, I find the society quite congenial."

"Congenial! It's easy for a beautiful girl to find society congenial, leave that to the plain ill bred ones. Congeniality is what they strive for, because they realize there's nothing better possible for them. Congenial! As though finding society congenial were the end-all of a beautiful, cultured girl's life Being congenial won't help you any, when you see the wrinkles coming. Congenial! Oh, indeed."

"You speak of people in this place as though they were inconsiderable. I'm afraid—"

"So they are inconsiderable," she cut in, "rising young men, promising young men, young men of intelligence—in fact—all young men, but young men without money. There's no sense in our trying to evade what's in each of our minds. When you say, 'it's quite congenial here,'—you mean Hugh Keene, and when I say 'inconsiderable people and young men of every kind but young men with money,' I mean Hugh Keene."

She rose to go indoors.

"But that's all nonsense. One can't live on promises or inconvertible intelligence. You really should appreciate that. I'll do my best to meet this Mr Walker: we can arrange it at the club—and you—" her shoulders shrugged expressively. Then suddenly her hard face softened (Ethel thought it looked much nicer inflexible), and she came quickly toward her daughter

"It's been an awful drag, dear—more of a drag than you at this time can appreciate. It's because I don't want that you should ever have to appreciate what denial means that I'm so anxious you should be comfortable Anything but a lack of money. That is doubly unbearable for those who are used to luxury. Think of that—try to imagine yourself without the luxuries you have come to consider the necessities of life, and you might get an inkling of what I mean." She turned and went into the house

III

Edith was splendidly, vibrantly alive as she mixed with the many people in the reception room of the exclusive Sunset club the night of the annual ball. She wore a wonderfully filmy cream colored gown that artistically subordinated itself to the soft tones of her face.

Mrs. Hilton was there, seeing all, understanding all, her deep piercing eyes darting everlastingly about the busy room, ready at any moment to appreciate anything that happened any place—in visual touch every second with the entire room. Both Edith and her mother were the guests of Hugh Keene.

In one corner of the room, surrounded by a group of worshipers of the shrine of gold, stood Walker.

When Hugh led Edith back after the first dance, Mrs Hilton spoke to him, drawing him slightly out of the range of passing guests

"That man over in the corner, the one in the center of that group, dark-haired, rather coarse featured, he's Mr. Walker, I believe?"

"Yes"

"Can you arrange so's he'll meet him?"

"Certainly, if you care to—I'll bring him over."

"Of course you won't say—"

"Nonsense, he'll come to meet you!"

He started for the far corner of the room and in a few moments returned. Walker in tow.

Introductions were soon over.

Walker bowed deferentially to Age, gallantly to Beauty, and all stood talking until Mrs. Hilton graciously indicated that Hugh offer her his arm. He did, rather reluctantly, and they moved off, leaving Edith and Walker alone

Hugh was worried at the evident attraction that Walker and Edith seemed to have for each other; so worried that he proposed to her during the very next dance—proposed and was put off with a—

"This is so sudden, Hugh. I hardly know my own mind"

The worry did not leave him the next day, did not even leave him that afternoon when Walker called on him and gave him a stock buying commission, and showed his confidence by leaving with him a certified check for $250 000, though the prospect of the commissions on the trading did open up possibilities.

Thoughts of Edith filled Hugh's every working moment. Now came this stranger to their city and into their society, and opened up prospects of wealth and luxury to their vain souls that made his offering seem inconsiderable. It was impossible, utterly, to contend with him from this angle, it would take years—unless—

He shook the thought from him, feeling unutterably wicked that he should have allowed it a place in his mind at all All the way home, and before he got into bed that night he tried to think of some way of overcoming the tremendous advantage of Walker's money—and always came back that dark thought, each banishment seeming only to increase the subtle insidiousness of the next attack, until he fell asleep, alternately hating himself and returning to the thought that darkly, fascinatingly followed that word, "unless—"

The next morning, on arising, he felt free of the fearful temptation of last evening It was a cheerless freedom, however, when he realized fully again the hopelessness of his position. I might better say it was a cheerless freedom until he realized again the hopelessness of his position: for with that full realization he was no longer free, except in the sense that the vicious, dark thoughts that had so harassed him all the night before were now only seeking the entrance he so dreaded yet wanted to give them

The fact that he could keep them out made him less vigilant than he earnestly endeavored felt he should

Ligonier Man For County Commisioner

George W. Deeds of Ligonier, authorizes this paper to insert his name in its political column and announce to the voters that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county commissioner. Mr. Deeds is one of Ligonier's and Westmoreland county's substantial citizens and successful business men.

Mr. Deeds believes in making a success of your own business before asking to be placed in a responsible position to transact business for the public. He has done this. Careful, shrewd and conservative in his private affairs, he has prospered, and during his long business career, he has held the confidence of his associates, his neighbors and the general public, and he is a fit man upon whom to impose the duties of county commissioner.

Mr. Deeds is a Democrat, not for what he can get out of his party, but as a matter of principle. He has never profited by his political affiliations, but Democrats and Republicans alike will admit that he deserves something at the hands of his party. He was a candidate two years ago for Prothonotary, but was defeated by a small margin by his Republican opponent, but his campaign brought strength to his party and left for him an everlasting friendship throughout the county. Mr. Deeds will leave Ligonier with a large vote and should his party nominate him, many of his Republican friends and neighbors will support him at the general election. All who know Mr. Deeds in and about Monessen will be glad to learn that he is a candidate for this important office and should he be elected no man need have any fears but what the office, so far as he is concerned, will receive the best attention at his hands and that the tax payers will get a square deal. His business training and his good judgment fits him well for county commissioner.

MORE WATER

Will the water company be honest with us and tell us just why they are raising the rates. Most people have an excuse when prices go up. Let's have a good reason.

If you buy a meter from Sears and Roebuck, you must have the company inspect it before you can measure the company's water to yourself through your own measure.

What business is there that wouldn't be profitable if it were possible to establish a minimum. It makes no difference whether you use the stuff or not, you pay the money just the same. If you use it then you pay for what you use.

Monessen now has a population of more than 20,000. This means additional revenue for the water barons. We counted eighteen thousand people when we figured up the profit for the water barons. It's come again, isn't it.

On dollar per for each boarder is added on your water bill and the Water company tells you how many boarders you are keeping. You have nothing to say. That's another trick in the trade.

Those alienists who got $15,000 each for testifying against Thaw are about the same as a bunch of hired witnesses to testify for water barons. We better just call them water alienists hereafer as a means of easy identification.

If a gas meter is furnished by the gas company to measure gas to the consumer and an electric meter is furnished by the electric light company to measure light to the consumer, why isn't a water meter furnished by the water company to furnish water for the consumer?

The witnesses hired by the Westmoreland water barons were glad to get off the stand. Great drops of perspiration stood out on their brows when they were testifying. The water fairly poured out of them while they were being forced to tell the truth. It maybe it will come out that they didn't tell the truth then.

We don't believe there is any law that will force the consumer to pay for a measure with which to measure a public service corporation's commodity to a market. We believe that the reason the Monessen people are doing it is because nobody has ever protested. We expect this fight to determine why the gas company owns the gas meters in town and why the electric light company owns its and why the consumers are forced to own the water meters.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR

So many thousands of women have been restored to health by Lydia E. GREEK PARLIAMENT WILL URGE WAR STAND

Athens, July 20—The Chamber of Deputies meets today, after two postponements, and this event promises to bring the nation to its ultimate stand in the war situation. With Venizelos at the helm, backed by a tremendous majority of the Chamber, there can be no great delay in declaring Greece an ally of the Quadruple Entente. The Helenic mind is made up, and nothing can stem the popular demand for immediate participation in the war. The Greek army, trained and hardy fighters, is anxious to get into the campaign against Turkey. A hundred thousand men are in training and the reserves have been notified of the government intention to call them to the colors.

OLYMPIC
HOME OF THE PIPE ORGAN

TUESDAY— The sixth and last episode of the beautiful American actress and ex-wife of the Khedive ruler of Egypt, "The Princess Hassan," who has escaped from the Sultan's harem and is telling her real experiences of the harem. As today is the final adventure of the Princess Hassan, we cordially invite every person to come to the Olympic, of course. Then in addition we have our friend and the friend of all, Charles Chaplin. His subject is "Masqueradors." Now we know that every time he is a masquerador, yet he calls this picture "Masquerador." We can imagine what kind of masquerading he will do today, but we have to see him anyway.

As far as Wednesday and Thursday are concerned, we need not say very much as long as we have the solid as a rock productions of "The Exploits of Elaine with Arnold Daly, Pearl White and Edwin Arden. Every patron of the Olympic knows as much about "The Exploits of Elaine" as the writer does.

THURSDAY also—The tenth chapter of "Who Pays?"—"The Pomp of the Earth" in three reels, featuring Ruth Roland and Henry King. The only fault we see in this picture is that we only have two more chapters after the tenth and we know that all our customers will miss this great production. They will for a fact wish we had some more chapters, they are so fine, so great, so educating, so fascinating, so sweet. They cannot help it. They are like the little fellow who wished he had a neck a mile long so he could taste the sweetness of the M. & B. ice cream longer.

FRIDAY AT OLYMPIC—Now for Friday. What will we say? Sit down and listen. Our dreams are solved. Moving pictures beneath the sea are now a reality. Scientists declare that with the perfection of the Williamson submarine tube, the first and only one upon the face of the earth. The moving picture world will soon be able to solve the secrets of the deep which have heretofore been clouded in mystery.

There are more treasures beneath the sea than on this earth. With this great invention we will soon restore all gold, silver, ivory and innumerable precious stones, when mankind may quit their slaughtering due to the lack of living necessitites. You will see the wonders of the bottom of the sea, which in many places are like the beautiful gardens of California. You will see the tiger of the sea, killed his lair. Williamson faces the terrors of the deep, eludes the ugly teeth of the shark and plunges a knife into his belly. It is the eight wonder of the world positively. Prices will be 15c and 25 cents.

SATURDAY—"The Ulster Lass," in two reels, an Irish drama, featuring Gauntier. The next is "Was she a Vampire?" featuring E. Maison. Also the Joker and the ninth chapter of the greatest serial picture on the market, "The Diamond from the Sky," in which every chapter is getting better, like "The Broken Coin.
